Sent Him Back.

New York, March 14.—[illegible] who landed yesterday was [illegible] Metz. [illegible] He said that he was only [illegible] of age that he came to this country in [illegible] 1865. After he had been here seven years he was naturalized. He returned to Germany, and some time [illegible] his naturalization papers. His health [illegible] and he was unable to support himself, [illegible] the authorities of Lambertsheim in Hesse-Darmstadt, where he was residing, sent him back to this country.

Cut the Wires.

Chicago, March 14.—[illegible] of the board of trade, the Western Union telegraph ceased supplying market reports to [illegible] and the wires connecting it with the regular board were cut. This was a surprise, as the only [illegible] of the open board people was that they were not [illegible] tested, not having joined the [illegible] in the legal fight. It is said the open board will be enabled to continue [illegible] by getting quotations of the Chicago market from Milwaukee.

Butler's Veto.

Boston, March 14.—A sensation was created in the legislature to-day by a message from Gov. Butler vetoing the bill making an appropriation for the expenses of various charitable and reformatory institutions. He says it contains appropriations for distinct purposes, some of which are objectionable and others not, and is a continuation of what he says is a vicious practice of uniting in one bill different appropriations for entirely diverse objects.

Catholics Aroused.

New York, March 14.—The accounts given in the newspapers concerning the burial of McGloin the murderer and Prize Fighter Elliott in Calvary cemetery seem to have excited the indignation of Catholics of this city, who appear to look upon the interment of the bodies of murderers in a cemetery as a desecration.

School of Whales Sighted.

The steamship Ander[illegible], which arrived yesterday from South America, reports passing a large school of whales about 100 miles east of Cape Henry. The whales seemed, as seen from the deck of the vessel, to be from 90 to 100 feet in length.

A Bishop's Funeral.

Mobile, March 14.—The funeral of Bishop Quinlan took place to-day. Eight bishops and forty priests were within the sanctuary rails of the cathedral, and the streets adjacent were crowded. A procession formed after mass of military, police, firemen, benevolent societies, clergy and orphans and sisters of charity, and moved through the principal streets of the city and back to the cathedral. After further religious rites the body was deposited in the bishops' tomb.

David Davis Married.

Raleigh, March 14.—To-day at 11 o'clock, at the residence of Hon. Wharton J. Greene, four miles from Fayetteville, Judge David Davis was married to Miss Addie Burr. The wedding was quiet and witnessed only by a few guests, Rev. J. L. Huske officiating. The presents were numerous and costly. At 1 o'clock the couple left on the steamer Murchison.

David Davis' Movements.

New York, March 14.—A Fayetteville (N. C.) special says: After the marriage ex-Senator and Mrs. Davis, with Judge Ott[illegible], Congressman Green and daughter, left on a special steamer and passed down the river to Wilmington, whence they go to southern cities, and thence to California, and after a short stay there go to their home in Bloomington, Ill.

Distributed the Money.

Louisville, March 14.—Mayor Jacobs, who was down the river with money for the relief of flood sufferers along the Ohio river in Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois, reports a disposition made of the funds at various points. He found much distress, but as a rule the people were disinclined to accept aid. At most places small sums were left with trusty persons for relief of actual suffering.

The Woman Wins the Suit.

Boston, March 14.—An important decision was rendered to-day by the supreme court against the Merchant's bank of this city, compelling the latter to restore to the plaintiff, a lady, securities amounting to $40,000, which plaintiff's trustee deposited as collateral for money advanced, and which, having been lost in speculations, made necessary a sale of the securities.

Decline of One Inch.

Helena, Ark., March 10.—A decline of one inch during the night. A line of skiffs has been put on between this point and [illegible]town and Clar[illegible]ville, Mississippi. Flat boats are delivering goods back through the country inaccessible by steamers. Business generally is resuming. For the first time in many years a swift current is coming down along shore, indicating a disposition on the part of the river to change its channel again in this [illegible]. Should this occur the big bar in front of Helena will be greatly diminished if not washed entirely away, while the river in the present channel will again fill up.

The Mississippi Levees.

Skipwith, Miss., March 14.—Dennis levee, near Australia, is reported cut. The chief engineer is having the sluices filled and intends closing the break at Ellis[illegible]'s by a barricade of planks and sacks of hay. Protection levee is still holding, and the main line is so nearly completed that all danger from overflow is considered over, and planting is progressing.

A Clock Company's Suit.

Chicago, March 14.—The charge of embezzling $5500 in money and goods has been preferred against W. C. Green by the Ferry Clock Company of Pittsfield, Mass., of which Green was agent here. Green says that the action was brought in malice because he wouldn't break the contract and put up the price on clocks, on which it has a monopoly.

Charged with Kidnapping.

The master of the whaling bark Hidalgo, which is about to sail, was brought into court this morning on a charge of attempting to kidnap a German named Berge. The evidence showed that Berge went on board the vessel, and then was obliged to remain. The court ordered him discharged.

Dividend Declared.

New York, March 14.—At a meeting of the Western Union Telegraph Co. to-day, a quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent was declared, payable on and after April 16th. John T. Terry was elected director of the company to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Governor Morgan.

Should not be More than Six Stories.

New York, March 14.—The coroner's jury, in the case of Mrs. and Miss Wakeman, suffocated at a fire at Cambridge flat, recommend the legislature to make laws prohibiting the erection of buildings over six stories high, as the fire department seems unable to cope advantageously with fire over that height.

Bismarck's Agent.

Philadelphia, March 14.—It is ascertained that Dr. Bedlock, of this city, is acting as the agent of Prince Bismarck, negotiating for the purchase of several million acres of land in Mexico for settlement by German emigrants. The land selected is rich in ores and plants.

Restoring Capital Punishment.

Augusta, Me., March 14.—The bill restoring the death penalty for murder, which came back from the senate denuded of certain amendments, was again passed by the house in its original form to-day. The legislature will probably adjourn to-morrow.

Not a Public Speaker.

New York, March 14.—The Sun says: Egan arrived by the Germanic. He occupies room 566 on the fourth story of the Grand Central hotel. He said he was not a public speaker and should not try in this country to become one.

The Harpers will not Build.

One of the members of the firm of Harper Bros. denies the story that they intend to purchase property in Bond street. He said the same story was circulated just a year ago, and he did not know how it originated even now.

Grant's Influence.

Jacob H. Vanderbilt, Jr., will leave for Mexico Thursday, in company with Theodore McNamee, to occupy important positions there. It is said in extension of railway communication, to which they have been appointed through the influence of Gen. Grant.

Impostors.

New Haven, March 14.—A troupe of colored singers, claiming to be the Fiske Jubilee, were not allowed to sing in the Grand opera house to-night by the proprietors, they not being the genuine Fiske troupe.

Rebellious Crew.

The ship Young America arrived in Port Townsend from Oregon with a rebellious crew. The men refused to wash down the decks and the officers had a lively time keeping them at work.

Wanted to Fight a Duel.

Richmond, Va., March 1[illegible].—Col. L. S. Marye, associate editor of the Advance, and R. T. Hubbard, a prominent lawyer, were about to engage in a duel. Marye was arrested, but Hubbard has not been found.

Assignment Filed.

New York, March 14.—The assignment of Theodore F. and James Carroll Humphrey, composing the hide and leather firm of Humphrey & Co., was filed to-day. It states the liabilities to be $526,47[illegible]; nominal assets $467,204; actual assets $119,407.

Wants a Certificate.

New York, March 14.—General passenger agents [illegible] passed a resolution demanding that a death certificate should accompany every corpse carried on the different roads to prevent spread of contagious diseases.

Citizens Indignant.

Uniontown, Pa., March 14.—Placards calling an indignation meeting to-morrow on account of the acquittal of Dukes are being posted up.

Fought for his Claim.

St. Paul, March 14.—Four men tried to drive Martin Pa[illegible] from his claim near L[illegible]. Pa[illegible] fired on them and killed one man, name unknown.

Lace Importer's Assignment.

New York, March 14.—[illegible] assets $[illegible].

Defrauding a Village.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., March 14.—John N. Osle, late superintendent of the water works, [illegible] on a charge of defrauding the village.

Coal and Lumber Dealer Assigns.

Buffalo, March 14.—[illegible] dealer at [illegible] has assigned. [illegible] nominal assets $[illegible].

Harrisburg, Pa., March 14.—[illegible] cremation [illegible]

Takes the Chester's Mails.

Halifax, March 14.—[illegible] the Chester's mails.

Inundated.

Memphis, March 14.—Lacrosse [illegible] is inundated from the break of Saturday.

THE OLD WORLD.

The Star Chamber Inquiry at Dublin Castle Proceeding Slowly.

Revolutionists of Paris Vigorously Denounce the Present Government.

Byrnes and Walsh to Start from France for America Saturday.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Dublin, March 14.—The star chamber inquiry at Dublin Castle to hear the evidence of the informers continues daily. As no details are made public, no intelligence can be gained of the evidence thus far adduced, but the star chamber manner in which the proceedings are being conducted has given rise to some ugly suspicions. It is known, however, that the various informers have been carefully coached, and that the testimony to be presented at the trial will clearly show this. Three or four persons were examined yesterday as to the movements from June to December last of the twenty-one prisoners now awaiting trial for conspiracy and murder, and a number supposed to be able to give evidence of a similar character have been summoned to attend to-day. The men in Kilmainham prison charged with conspiracy and murder continue in good health, with the exception of Patrick DeLaney, charged with attempting to murder Judge Lawson. They are kept in solitary confinement, with the exception of two hours every day, when they are marched around the yard at a certain distance from each other. Even when one of them is allowed to see a legal adviser a large table separates them, and a warden is present at interviews. Besides armed police, the jail is guarded both by day and night by soldiers.

ENGLAND.

England and the Boers.

London, March 14.—In the commons Gorst, conservative, moved that, in view of the complications with the Boers in the [illegible] attacks on the native chiefs, energetic steps will be taken forthwith to secure strict observance of the convention of 1881. The under colonial secretary concurred in the motion condemning the many attacks on the natives, but said the government was bound to act in accordance with the interests of England. It would not fail to reorganize the chief's claim on the government, but the convention imposed no obligation on England, although it conferred a right to remonstrate when affairs demanded remonstrance. If England sent a force to the Transvaal to prevent marauding it must remain there. If such policy was pursued it would lead to war. He believed the Boers amenable to English public opinion. Adjourned.

Parnell's Bill.

London, March 14.—In the commons Chaplin, conservative, moved the rejection of Parnell's bill. Thomas Dickson, liberal, supported the measure because it embodied the programme adopted by the conference of Ulster tenants. Gladstone said the land act was far more efficient than Parnell had described. He said the Parnell bill amounted virtually to a remodeling of the land act.

Gladstone strongly denounced Parnell's statement that the courts imposed rack rents. He insisted that the tenants were willing to pay the rents fixed by the courts. I hoped Parnell would give an assurance that the new crusade would be conducted in a strictly legal manner. It would be a violation of the duty of the government to demand further sacrifices from the landlords. Gladstone's remarks were repeatedly cheered by the tory members.

The second reading of Parnell's bill was then rejected by a vote of 63 ayes to 25 noes.

Must be Amended.

London, March 14.—In the commons to-day Parnell moved the second reading of his bill amending the land act. He said the agitation in Ireland must continue to increase until the act is amended.

Parnellites Not Represented.

A meeting of Irish, Scotch and English members of Parliament was held yesterday, at which it was decided to form a political committee with the view of forming public opinion in regard to Irish reform. The committee is quite an impartial one. No Parnellites are connected with it.

Snap Judgment Should Not be Given.

London, March 14.—There is a very general feeling among persons interested in the Virginia bonds that no hasty opinion should be formed in the absence of full details of the judgment of the United States supreme court and the views of lawyers engaged in the case.

The Transvaal Question.

There is a strong difference among the liberal members of parliament on the Transvaal question. Many of them believe that England is morally bound to protect the Bechurans.

Three Thousand Men Strike.

London, March 14.—Three thousand men in the Huddersfield district have struck work, owing to disagreements with the masters regarding wages.

FRANCE.

The French Revolutionists.

Paris, March 14.—The revolutionists have resolved to hold henceforth regular fortnightly meetings in different quarters of the city. These meetings are announced under the auspices of the committee. A meeting has just taken place in a large hall in one of the eastern quarters. Several leading spirits of the revolutionary party were present. According to the practice of their anarchical principles the chairman and bureau were dispensed with. The new ministry was condemned as a set of agents of the moneyed class and bent upon effecting the ruin of the republic. After 12 years' republicanism that such a cabinet should be a possibility was pronounced to be simply heartbreaking. The audience were urged to the establishment of a genuine republic. The people of Paris, said one fiery orator, in times past flooded the streets of Paris with their blood, and they had plenty left in their veins to do so again. The meeting separated with cries of "Vive la Commune."

France's Foreign Policy.

Paris, March 14.—In the senate last night Count De St. Vieller questioned Challemel Lacour, minister of foreign affairs, as to the situation in the French colonies, especially in Tonquin, England, Germany and America. He said he observed that the extreme east urged the occupation of Tonquin in order to accelerate the occupation of Cochin China. Challemel Lacour, in reply, said the government intended neither to abandon nor to conquer Tonquin, but to occupy it at certain points in order to demonstrate that France proposed to remain there.

Will Adjourn.

Paris, March 14.—The chambers adjourn the 20th and will thus be able to speedily legislate in case of disorders on the 18th, when socialists propose to hold a meeting in the Champs de Mars. An explosive machine was discovered Sunday in the square which the Hotel de Ville fronts, and others have since been found in various parts of the city.

De Lesseps' Plan.

Marseilles, March 14.—De Lesseps has embarked for Tunis to direct the survey in the project to convert the desert of Sahara into an inland sea.

Walsh will not be Extradited.

Havre, March 14.—The evidence against J. Walsh was insufficient to warrant his extradition. Walsh will likely accompany Byrnes and wife on Saturday to America.

Leading France to Ruin.

Paris, March 14.—Count De Chambord, in answering an address presented by 400 workingmen of Lyons, said the republic was infallibly leading France to ruin.

RUSSIA.

Female Nihilist Arrested.

St. Petersburg, March 14.—A woman named Figner, an important nihilist, who arranged the murder of General Streltnikoff at Odessa in '82, has been arrested.

Died with his Mistress.

The intestines of Prince Gortschakoff have been sent to Freiburg to be analyzed. The prince died at the villa of his German mistress, with whom he became acquainted during the sitting of the Berlin congress.

Supposed Nihilists Arrested.

St. Petersburg, March 14.—Several persons suspected of being nihilists have been captured on Vassili Islan[illegible].

AUSTRIA.

Will be Prosecuted.

Vienna, March 14.—The reichsrath, by a vote of 188 to 117, has given sanction to the prosecution of Herr Schonerer, member, for that body, on account of a speech he delivered at a meeting of the [illegible] which [illegible] was closed by the authorities last Saturday.

PORTUGAL.

The Black Hand.

Lisbon, March 14.—[illegible] Black Hand [illegible] were arrested, and important papers seized. [illegible]

INDIA.

THE STAR ROUTE TRIAL.

The [illegible] of Wrong [illegible] before the [illegible] Attorneys of both Sides.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Washington, March 14.—In the star route trial [illegible] the falsity of [illegible] statement [illegible] this. It would prove that Rerdell [illegible] witness [illegible] Dorsey [illegible] had another [illegible].

Wilson said the prosecution had offered evidence to show the improper use of money by Dorsey, and it was but fair that they should have an opportunity to disprove. The defense should not be compelled to meet the whole case at once; they should be allowed to disprove one point after another. Where J. H. Mitchell [illegible] receiving money they could show it was not true, where Turner [illegible] charged them [illegible].

Ingersoll [illegible] Dorsey to swear that he never [illegible] and never paid money to Turner.

[illegible] said certainly.

Ingersoll said of course he could strongly [illegible] of that he never got money. It made no difference which end of the inquiry they began.

Davidge remarked: Dorsey is under no compulsion to go on the stand.

The court said it might lead to an evasion of the rule referring to the best evidence.

Ingersoll—Do you mean books?

Court—Yes.

Ingersoll—I have said again and again that the books spoken of by Rerdell [illegible]. He will so swear. The books were Rerdell's, and he got them from New York. I will prove that he never got them. I will prove that he never saw or even heard of these books before the beginning of these cases. He may have kept [illegible] private accounts and books.

The court—I mean stubs.

Ingersoll—They had nothing to do with the $600 entry against Jones. When it comes to that I will prove that there were no such books and I will show that no check ever existed such as described by Rerdell.

The court said it would not admit secondary evidence on a pledge to show hereafter that there was no primary evidence.

Ingersoll inquired how they would proceed otherwise when the books did not exist.

The court said that had never been regularly shown.

Ingersoll expressed his abiding confidence in his ability to show the falsity of Rerdell's evidence.

Merrick contested the position taken by Ingersoll. He said that he had seen [illegible] as a professional gentleman to restrain witnesses from bringing in the names of [illegible] persons, and when it had been done he had endeavored to have all such mention excluded. He asked why the defense did not put Brady on the stand to swear that he did not give money. They proved Brady to be identical with Smith, but they expressly refrained from proving Turner to be the same.

Carpenter and Wilson were on their feet at this point, making earnest appeals to the court to arrest Merrick's remarks, and finally secured attention.

Carpenter bitterly stigmatized Merrick's statements in regard to the defendant taking the stand as unprofessional and illegal.

The court did not see where it was illegal.

Wilson entered formal objection and charged Merrick with ulterior motives in making such remarks.

Merrick denied any such motives. He acknowledged that in the first trial he had done all he could for the court, but it was not necessary. He proceeded to explain his remark, but the court said it could not allow the grave insinuation created by his previous remarks to depend upon his explanation.

Merrick said he would stop immediately.

Court reserved decision until after recess.

Brady on the Stand.

Thos. J. Brady, ex-assistant postmaster general, is now on the stand testifying in the star route case. His testimony thus far has been confined to a general denial of the statements of witness Walsh, which Brady says is false from beginning to end; in short, a lie made out of whole cloth.

SOUTH AMERICAN NEWS.

The Peace Party in Peru Gathering Strength—Preparation for the Proposed Confederation in Central America Pending—Etc.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Panama, March 13.—Charles De Lesseps and a number of engineers have arrived here from France.

The congress of Colombia formally opened on the 1st inst. In the election of officers a black man named Ruiss became vice president of the senate. The president's message was very lengthy. He declares the country to be fairly prosperous, that public works are progressing, and that there is not any probability of peace being disturbed. At the same time he states that the treasury is in a lamentable condition.

Peace reigns in all the five Central American states, and the federation scheme attracts more and more attention. A meeting of the five states will be held at Salva[illegible] in the present month, at which the scheme will be fully discussed.

The Pacific Mail and Panama railroad are reducing rates on freights, in consequence of the opposition of German steamers, which carry coffee through the Straits of Magellan to Europe for $25 per ton.

Veintimilla, the Ecuadorian dictator, is compelled to remain inactive in Guayaquil. Excesses of his subordinates have brought two international questions upon his hands—one with England and the other with Italy.

It is probable Colombia will recognize the revolutionists as belligerents, if they gain nearly the whole country, and will prohibit the passage of arms for either party across the Isthmus. Eighteen cannons for the dictator have been ordered from New York.

The Hereford is at Callao. The Essex is also at that port.

The Iroquois has gone on a cruise to the southward, intending to call at Mollendo, which is blockaded, and forward dispatches from Minister Partridge to Montero.

There is no news of the least importance from Peru, but the peace party is gathering strength. It has published a newspaper in Lima, and there are reasons to hope that the Chilians will make terms with the peace representatives, and by exhausting [illegible] a government to be formed which will be able to suppress those preferentially bellicose individuals, Montero and Caceres.

Skirmishes between the parties continue, but the Chilian troops have experienced no attack in any part of the country.

The Cuban Cespedes has a few men in Moquegua, and is making matters generally lively for the unfortunate inhabitants.

Gen. Hilarion D. Aza, who left Bolivia prior to the battle of Tacna, owing to a barrack movement against him, has petitioned the actual president of Bolivia to allow him to return and disprove the charges which have been made against him.

The Chilian government is said to have had sold the ironclad Arthur Pratt, now being built in England, for $160,000, the purchaser being the Italian government.

The smallpox is raging in the southern department of Chili.

The Oregon Short Line Company Pushing Developments.

The Road to be Completed Before the Expiration of 1883.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Salt Lake, March 14.—There is great activity along the Oregon Short Line railroad, and large numbers of men and teams are being sent out from this city and other points to work on it. It is the determination of the company to complete the line to Baker City this year. By the 1st of April it is expected that trains will be running through from Granger, on the Union Pacific, to the Wood River country. Next month the present junction where trains of the Utah and Northern connect with this new line for Wood River is at Marshall.

CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco's Shipping.

San Francisco, March 14.—Considerable speculation is indulged in on change as to the probable effect on the wheat market of the charters made on deep water vessels between this port and foreign ports. In consequence of exceedingly low freight rates a number of charters have been taken to load coal at Seattle, masters of vessels preferring to wait for a rise in rates on long voyages, at the same time profiting by the opportunity to keep vessels in commission instead of lying idle in port. The Oregon Improvement company is the first to profit by the dull season in freights and already has chartered three vessels, which leave for Seattle as soon as they discharge their present cargo. The company to-day declared its first semi-annual dividend of 3½ per cent, payable to-morrow.

Shipping Vines to Mexico.

San Francisco, March 14.—For some time past the Mexican government has become interested in California vines, and has recently entered into negotiations for several shipments of cuttings, which are to be distributed under the direction of the government of the several Mexican states. An order was recently received for the prompt shipment of a million of these cuttings, a portion of which has already been filled. During the past week 400 cases were forwarded by Napoleon P. Vallejo of Sonoma to Mexico by way of Guaymas, and an additional shipment of 300 cases was subsequently sent by way of the Southern Pacific railroad to El Paso. Other shipments are yet to follow, and it is believed that the order will be duplicated.

Midnight Robberies and Assaults.

San Francisco, March 14.—Since the street lights were discontinued the detectives have been busily engaged, midnight assaults frequently occurring. Last night three men were stopped and made to give up their money. John Geary, a well known merchant, 70 years of age, was badly beaten and robbed. Doubts are entertained of his recovery. Tuesday night two ladies were stopped on Van Ness avenue and valuables taken from them. A number of mysterious deaths have been reported to the authorities, but there is little prospect of their being unraveled.

In Favor of Oakland.

San Francisco, March 14.—A telegram has been received from Acting Secretary of the Treasury H. F. French, stating that so much of the instructions recently issued to the collector of customs in this district applying to Oakland as not being a port of delivery is suspended. An effort will be made at the next session of congress to have the question permanently settled in favor of Oakland merchants.

The Whaling Fleet.

San Francisco, March 14.—A majority of the whaling fleet has taken its departure for the Arctic, under what is considered a prospect for a good catch. The fleet is increased by the addition of a number of steam vessels.

MONTANA.

A Six Mile Railroad.

Livingston, March 14.—A contract has been signed between Winston Bros. of Minneapolis and H. Clark, of New York, on one hand, and Chief Engineer Anderson, representing the Northern Pacific railway, for building a branch line from Livingston to H[illegible] Springs on Gardiner's river, in the National park, a distance of about six miles. The course marked out extends up the left bank of the Yellowstone, and is almost level. It is understood the line will be ready for travel the 1st of July.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Folger in Doubt.

Washington, March 14.—Before Secretary Folger was taken sick he said the vacancy caused by the resignation of Treasurer Gilfillan would be filled by promotion out of the offices of that bureau. The only persons considered in that connection is Assistant Treasurer Wyman and E. O. Graves of the redemption agency. It was stated positively at the White House to-day that the appointment will be made as soon as Secretary Folger makes known his wishes in the matter, and that he is only hesitating between Wyman and Graves.

Treasury Statement.

The statement of the United States treasurer shows gold, silver and United States notes in the treasury to-day as follows: Gold coin and bullion, $179,867,403; silver dollars and bullion, $106,556,446; fractional silver coin, $27,674,972; United States notes, $457,014,77[illegible]; total, $358,785,407. Certificates outstanding: Gold, $41,129,700; silver, $69,014,080; currency, $10,410,000.

PATRICK EGAN IN AMERICA.

The Former Land League Secretary Informs the United States what he Thinks of Irish Affairs.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

New York, March 14.—Patrick Egan, former treasurer of the land league, arrived yesterday. He was asked the name of the vessel in which he arrived and the port from which he sailed. He asked to be excused answering, so to do would direct attention to a private matter. Egan says the police contracts [illegible] his escape from Dublin are entirely without foundation. Egan, in answer to questions, said: The chief purpose of my visit is commercial. I have been long wanting to visit Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul and other large exporting centers in connection with the business of my firm in Dublin, as we deal largely in American flour, and my decision to come here was hastened by an urgent request of [illegible] I give evidence in the extradition proceedings [illegible] and also by a strong request from Sweeny, president of the American league, and other friends who pressed him to come to America to give the leaders of the movement here such information as is in my power regarding the situation at home. Although at this moment the national cause is surrounded by some difficulties, the prospect is entirely hopeful. I have always said, with John Mitchel, that the more England is obliged to coerce us the more tightly she is obliged to put on the screws, and we obtain our independence. The brutality practiced the past two years by the base, bloody and brutal whigs has widened the gulf between England and Ireland a hundred fold. I am firmly convinced that the present mass of things must result before long in the attainment by the Irish people of some measure of national self government. As a matter of course the government would be wanting in its duty if it did not do everything possible to convict its members, providing it acted fairly and squarely, but the whole course adopted towards the men now under arrest has been, to my mind, simply atrocious. They arrested a number of men whom they believed to belong to a Fenian organization, and marched them into the courtyard before a window behind which were a number of wretched people, and were thus able to swear their identification and their position. Prisoners have been kept in close confinement without an opportunity of communicating with their families or arranging defense. Every means has been used to spread horror, and the result is the defense has been a mere scramble, provided in some cases by private subscriptions, and in others by money scraped up by their unfortunate relations. It is currently rumored in Dublin that a certain magistrate who took an active part in the investigation will receive £500 pounds and the governorship of a colony if he labors secure ten convictions. Not a penny of the land league money was ever supplied for the purpose of the conspiracy. On the contrary money was expended in preventing outrages by sending men to localities where there might be danger of attempts against landlords. Among those who owe their preservation to the land league is Lord Ardilaun, formerly Sir Arthur Guinness. But for its protection he would have fallen victim to his

BREAK UP THE ASSASSINATION CONSPIRACY AND

HARSHLY TREATED TENANTS.

The game of the castle officials is to connect the league with the commission of outrages and thus damage the national party. I am informed that a leading castle official said they would spend £50,000 to hang Egan. In the packed system Egan says in a capital case a prisoner has twenty challenges, and the crown an unlimited right to challenge. The crown reason exhausts his twenty, and if a Catholic, Liberal Presbyterian, Methodist or Quaker is called the crown orders him to stand aside, and by this process selects a jury of 11 tories. With a jury of this kind, a prosecuting judge and a well coached battalion of trained [illegible] testimony, the castle can, if they so desire, convict with perfect certainty Cardinal McCabe or Bishop McEvilly. It is now admitted at the castle that one official made an admission that Hynes was hanged in the wrong, and that they know the real murderer to be Dr[illegible], but that, having [illegible] Hynes, they do not want to open up the case again. Beyond doubt four men, Walsh, Kehoe, Joyce and Barret, were innocent of the crimes for which they suffered. The charges against Sheridan are absolutely ridiculous. Foster repeated in commons that Sheridan was constantly going back and forth from me in Paris to outrage centers in west Ireland. As a matter of fact Sheridan left Ireland for Paris in 1881, and has only returned once, a single visit made in December, 1881, when he was disguised, as a warrant for his arrest had been issued. His object then was to extricate and harmonize certain alleged difficulties in connection with the

LITTLE LAND LEAGUE.

then paid him £[illegible], half of which he gave to Rev. Mr. Lawler, of Valencia, for the relief of evicted tenants in great need. He also gave other sums to evicted tenants, and gave vouchers for all expenditures. In April, 1881, Richard Pigott wrote me that he had been offered £[illegible] by a castle official to publish a statement in his paper against Irish men, alleging a misappropriation of land league funds. He said he needed money, and threatened to accept this offer unless I sent him £300. Of course I refused and defied him to do his worst. Subsequently, pamphlet, the manuscript of which was in Pigott's writing, was set up in type for Lady Florence Dixie. She became frightened at the character of the charges against the leaders of the land league, and gave orders that the few copies printed should be burned and the type broken up. I secured one copy, and all the charges made since by Lady Florence Dixie are the same as those then made in the pamphlet. Of course they are utterly false. My accounts have been thoroughly audited by John Dillon, Rev. Father Sheehy and Matthew Harris. No complaint has ever been made by actual subscribers to the land league. The balance of funds on hand at the time of the national conference in Dublin in October last was £21,900. This amount was increased by some small amounts received afterwards, and out of it there has been given to the

LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN

For the Mansion House committee for the relief of evicted tenants £5000; there has been expended by the committee composed of Parnell, John Dillon and Arthur O'Connor, £2500, and for the relief of evicted tenants some other small amounts were also expended. There is now on hand between £22,000 and £26,000, all of which is invested in American securities, in the names of five trustees.

Egan will attend the league convention on the 25th inst. at Philadelphia. Parnell or Sexton will be there also if possible, but both cannot be absent at the same time from parliament. Egan expects to be in this country three or four months, and will not make speeches in the interval.

Simply States [illegible] Don't Count.

New York, March [illegible].—The Times editorial on Egan: He will be more comfortable here than in Dublin, and there are thousands of his countrymen and countrywomen in the United States who are anxious to question him somewhat closely as to the use made of the land league funds. He denies that any part of the money in his hands was spent in aiding the conspirators to murder English officials. This was to be expected, but Egan must not expect the people to accept his unsupported word. The land league will never be vindicated until an examination of the accounts has shown where the money did go. Egan should clear himself of the land league of damaging suspicions by abuse of the castle officials or schemes to bring about jury packing in Dublin.

Egan's Statement Unsatisfactory.

New York, March 14.—Speaking of Egan, the World says: The purpose of his visit will be of equal moment to the English police and to subscribers of the land league, the former believing him to have fled from justice and the latter wanting to know what has become of the money. His statement to reporters will satisfy neither, for he says that the only action which he feared was action against him by, and that the subscribers are perfectly satisfied with the administration of the funds. He assume that even if money was paid to commit murder, by the league they [illegible] would be satisfied.

Egan's Movements.

New York, March 14.—The Times says: Patrick Egan, ex-treasurer of the Irish national land league, arrived Monday. After breakfast he called at the office of the Irish World, 25 Park place, and had an interview with John Devoy, editor of that paper. He next called on Patrick Ford, editor of the Irish World, and subsequently returned to the Irish Nation, where he made an appointment to meet Wm. D. Wallace, president of the New York land league.

Will not Say Where he Landed.

New York, March 14.—Herald: Egan has been in New York since Monday. He declined to say by what steamer he came or whether he landed at this city, Philadelphia, Baltimore or Halifax. It is of no public interest, he said, with a smile, and it might embarrass some friends of mine.

NO RESTRICTION.

It is The Oregonian's habit, and the habit has grown into a principle, to give every one who writes respectfully on a subject under discussion a fair hearing. It therefore prints "J. D.'s" communication on the liquor license question. From his argument there is a single logical conclusion, namely, that the sale of intoxicating liquors ought to be unrestricted and free; that any check upon that sale and consumption, through license fees or other regulations is an interference with private rights, an invasion of personal privileges, and that the legislative power is doing an act of inexcusable injustice when, through taxation or otherwise, it obstructs the business or places limitations upon it. This is a position from which every community finds it necessary, in the interest of good order and public peace, to dissent. Nowhere is the free sale of intoxicating liquors permitted. All experience shows that it leads to abuses which society cannot tolerate. Then, since the business must be restrained, the measure of restriction becomes a matter of opinion and discussion. This is the status of the question in Portland to-day. We should have better order in the city, fewer crimes and misdemeanors, less vagrancy, more industry, fewer criminal prosecutions, less work for our courts of justice, and lighter taxes, if the sale of liquors were under better restriction. Who doubts it? The fear that workingmen, or any class of men, can't get liquors enough for their needs if license fees are raised need not be alarming. Under any system likely to be maintained there will be saloons enough. Nor should the fear that a worse class of liquors will be sold than those now dispensed at a large number of places in every city occasion more trouble. If higher license fees would shut up places where men are drugged with vile liquors, there would seem to be little cause for any class to complain, save only those who were driven out of the business.

VIRGINIA'S "ADJUSTMENT."

The "adjustment" of the debt of Virginia has been the subject of a great deal of comment, much of which doubtless has been based on misinformation. An authoritative statement of the "Riddleberger debt law" has just been printed by order of the legislature of the state, showing just what is meant by "adjustment." It appears that in January, 1861, just prior to the opening of the rebellion, the debt of the state was $31,800,712. This was the principal, and in addition there were arrears of interest exceeding $1,000,000. Owing to the war these arrears rapidly increased. On the 20th June, 1863, the state of West Virginia was admitted into the union. The property and resources of Virginia, upon which the debt had been founded, were, by this partition of the old state, reduced, one-third of her territory and one-fifth of her population going to form West Virginia. Reduction of taxable property and the loss of revenue to Virginia was proportionately large; and hence it is assumed that the old state ought to pay no more than two-thirds of the original debt, which was created before West Virginia was detached from her. Two-thirds of the said debt, principal and interest, up to July 1st, 1882, was computed at $21,035,777; and this is the sum which the "readjusters" say Virginia will pay.

There is equity in this showing; but it in no wise mitigates the hard luck of the creditors of Virginia. If they lose one-third of their money, as they seem likely to do, the loss will have to go as one of the incidental losses of the great rebellion. There appears to be no way to shoulder upon West Virginia the one-third of the debt which the old state insists she ought to pay, and it is not to be supposed that she will ever voluntarily assume it. It is easy to see too how seductive to the people of Virginia is the argument that they ought not to pay it all.

WOMEN AT HARVARD.

An effort is being put forth, with every prospect of success, to raise $100,000 as an endowment fund, to be applied to education of women at Harvard. It is proposed to organize a plan for the collegiate instruction of women, and to ask the university to adopt it. The press of Boston, and indeed of New England generally, approves the scheme, which is one of the many efforts now making to afford women opportunity for advanced education. For some years a plan by which women wishing to learn might find persons competent to teach has been in operation at Harvard, but the work has had no recognized position as part of the great university. The effort now is to gain this recognition, and to secure for women a share of the educational advantages to be had at Harvard. The present arrangement is not satisfactory enough—since it is not stable enough for a permanent institution, depending as it does on the private co-operation of instructors in work outside their regular duties; and hence the university is asked to take up what is begun, embody it in its own work, and continue it. It is believed that the endowment will be obtained and the request will be granted by the university.

This is another of many indications which point to the fact that all colleges which expect to keep pace with the requirements of the times must make provision for the education of women. The fact that the time has come for Harvard to consider the subject shows the strength of the movement. When a demand exists for increased facilities of education no college can afford to ignore it. The English universities are rapidly extending their privileges to women, and all the colleges in the United States which have not made similar provision must do likewise if they would maintain the position which they have gained, or gain the position to which they aspire.

The Sacramento Record-Union demands higher license fees from the liquor trade of the city. From all classes of license rights the city now collects $26,000 a year. The Record-Union proposes an increase which it estimates will produce $39,400 from liquor licenses, with these additional results, viz.: "(1) All merchandise license tax abolished; (2) water rates reduced to the lowest possible figure; (3) we add a large sum to the city revenues, enabling taxation to be reduced and the city made more inviting to poor men and to capitalists alike, with the consequent prosperity that must flow from such a condition; (4) we will, to a large extent, if not wholly, eliminate the low doggery, the deadfall and the robber's roost from our system and thereby lessen the expenses of our city government in keeping the lawless element in check." From all quarters there is heard a demand for judicious increase of license fees; and as there are few cities in which such fees are as low as in Portland, there is none in which the increase may be more properly tried.

The New Orleans Picayune says that that city is "rapidly drifting toward more bloodletting on a large scale," in its endeavor to establish fully the right of self-government. The frauds perpetrated in the last municipal election it pronounces more daring than any of the alleged falsification during the days of the old returning-board. "Over five thousand ballots were stuffed into the boxes and the ballots which were honestly cast were not correctly counted." Indictments were framed against the offenders, but the state courts have done nothing since; while the proceedings of the United States courts have been annulled for informality. The Picayune further declares that the conviction, unwelcome though it be, has been forced upon the minds of all good citizens that the state government under which we live is as loth to protect the ballot-box as in the radical days, and that extraordinary measures will have to be resorted to before the city will have the rights of freemen.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

The most practical sort of education is that which puts those who receive it in the way of honorably getting a living. A school which would graduate farmers and skilled workmen would do vastly more good than one turning out classical scholars. The failure of our expensive public school system in many of its higher purposes is making education in relation to industry, particularly, a subject of the most considerate thought upon the public mind. Enlightened governments, struggling with some of the severest problems of civilization, have found great aid in their solution by modifying the instruction given children in the schools. Educated labor is found to conduce greatly to national prosperity.

In the United States there is rapidly developing a popular feeling favorable to the introduction of industrial courses in our public schools in the place of there being not time for all of some higher studies now pursued. Men of wealth who cheerfully bear their share of the school burden, want to see some practical good result from popular schools. They want to see and they long it to see a better citizenship as a consequence of their generosity. And the thinking farmer and mechanic want to see taught in the schools for whose support they are taxed and in which their children are educated, courses which will benefit the classes to which they belong. The farmer, striving to improve his land and crop and stock, asks himself a thousand questions and is obliged to confess his inability to answer half of them satisfactorily. There is a latent, deeply-rooted belief in his mind that it is possible that his son may be so taught—and that, too, in the common school, as to know not only the innumerable details and the practical working of the farm, where he himself is the best teacher, but also the things which have been beyond his comprehension. The peculiarities of soils, the causes of deficiencies in crops, the insects that injure them, the unproductiveness of his orchards, the diseases of his stock, the inconveniences of his buildings, these and similar things attract his attention, give rise to questions which he knows not how to answer correctly, and fix in his mind the thought that if education is education it can and should teach how to avoid or remedy the evils which are robbing him of his profit, and impairing his prosperity. There are also those who take a more comprehensive and far-reaching view of the subject. They remember that agriculture feeds the world and gives employment to a multitude of its inhabitants; that it is an art founded on science, and that as the departments of science on which it is based are more thoroughly known, and the art itself is carried to greater perfection, the world will be better fed and the services of those that till the earth more richly rewarded. They regret that agriculture is slow to advance. Oldest of the arts, it is almost last to come into deserved prominence, and to receive systematic and liberal encouragement and aid.

An idea prevails with the mechanic similar to that entertained by the farmer. He, too, sees in a suitable education the advancement of his position and the elevation of his children. A proof of this is furnished by the answers given by employes in various kinds of factories and shops to questions concerning education asked of them by the New Jersey bureau of statistics and industries. A laborer in a glass factory writes: "Technical education should be made compulsory for the laboring class." A silk-worker says: "Industrial schools as they exist in Europe should be set up." A carpenter believes that "There should be appropriations for technical schools in every city." The idea of education for business and for labor penetrates, pervades and permeates the masses. It has compelled recognition in political circles, and statesmen have sought means whereby it might be satisfied. To use the words of President White of Cornell university: "It is not to be scolded out of existence by solid review articles or pooh-poohed out of existence by pleasant magazine articles. Evidently the idea is rooted in our planet and will hardly be pulled up by narrow literary men who hold the time-honored studies the most eminently respectable; or by narrow practical men who disbelieve in "book farming"; or by narrow religious men who fear that geology may harm Genesis."

It was in conformity to this practical, popular, and controlling idea of educating men for their work that colleges of agriculture and the mechanic arts were established, and are arranging and putting into operation their courses of study, training, and experimentation. These colleges have exhibited excellent results, but so small a proportion of the youth of the country that their benefits cannot become general. What is needed is a system of industrial education to be part of the public school course. The problem of its organization is a task well worth the consideration of educators.

The announcement that the French cities and villages will no longer be called upon to pay for the maintenance of public worship will give much satisfaction in France, except among those devout ones who think that the government honors itself when it supports priests and pastors. The municipal contributions towards the maintenance of public worship in France have been about four million dollars a year, while the state has paid about ten or eleven millions, of which nearly nine million dollars are paid as salaries to Roman Catholic prelates and priests. Besides this, the French churches have an immense amount of property, much of it productive, and they collect from the people as we do in this country. This state of affairs is greatly disliked by two opposite classes—that which is opposed to the churches, and that which believes the church so holy as not to need any secular alliances and aids. And experience shows that the church is free only where it has nothing to do with the civil government.

There are now 46,893 postoffices in the United States. The postmasters at 2092 of these offices are appointed by the president, and at 44,801 they are appointed by the department. Eleven of the postmasters of Oregon and eight of those of Washington are presidential appointments. Under the new law, which changes the pay of fourth-class postmasters, the compensation at those offices which yield a revenue of $1000 a year is to be $640; $900 a year, $590; $800 a year, $540; $700 a year, $490; $600 a year, $440; $500 a year, $380; $400 a year, $320; $300 a year, $260; $200 year, $200; $100 a year, $100; $50 a year, $50.

Herbert Spencer writes to the St. James's Gazette to object to being held responsible for views advanced by him 32 years ago on the land question, which he has since repudiated and stricken from his republished works. Even these views were expressed tentatively, but they were quoted by Henry George in his book "which I closed after a few minutes," says Spencer, "on finding how visionary were its ideas." A recent writer has reviewed Spencer severely for his early views. But it is an absurd thing to censure a writer for not adhering through all his life to his early and immature opinions. And yet nearly every great man has been attacked by criticisms of this kind.

HIGH LICENSE IN CHICAGO.

Chicago Tribune.

One of our contemporaries has interviewed Messrs. Chapin & Gore (prominent liquor dealers) to ascertain their sentiments on the question of high license. The views expressed by Messrs. C. & G. are similar to those expressed by some of the others of their class. They personally care nothing at all about the matter as to payment of $500 [illegible] which is nothing to them. They care nothing for the [illegible] wiping out of low doggeries, but they express an apprehension (for publication) that the effect of High License would be to wipe out a number of small saloons, which they profess to claim as "poor but honest and respectable" institutions, and are inclined, indeed, to regard as highly moral institutions, as saloons go. While a line may be drawn between liquor saloons, it simply reaches from the maximum to the minimum of vice, and none of them can boast of a standard of morality that pleads for their encouragement or multiplication, or that warrants them in setting up as moral instructors for the youth of Chicago. Admit, however, that high license will wipe out some of the alleged moral and pious little gin shops, is that a hardship? Admit that there are a dozen of those respectable and spiritual institutions about our lumberyards guilty of no violent infractions of law. Even then would it not be better, for the laborers and for their wives and families to reduce the number to three or four and save some of the wages of the laborers to apply for the comforts and conveniences of home? Would it be any hardship for the eight moral and religious saloon-keepers who can't pay a high license to go to work as moral lumber-shovers instead of shoving poison over their bars? Suppose that [illegible] for a thousand men there are twenty-five or thirty moral and pious little saloons [illegible] could not support themselves on the wages of those employed. Would it be any injustice to the men to reduce the number to six and thereby reduce one-half the drinking and drunkenness, the poverty and misery, and the sufferings of the families of the workingmen? These leeches that are found in our manufacturing centers may be very moral and very pious little bloodsuckers, but they are just as industrious as the other ones in absorbing the wages of the work hands and robbing families of support. If 75 per cent of them are shut up their owners can get employment at some honest and productive work fully as moral, pious, and respectable, so they will not suffer, while the condition of the workingman would be proportionately enhanced by the removal of three-quarters of the temptation to squander his earnings in the dramshops instead of spending it for the support of his wife and children.

With one half or two-thirds of these dens wiped out entirely, and the survivors depending for their existence upon their quietness and good behavior, preserving at least the forms of decency and order, everyone knows that not only will drunkenness be reduced, but crime of every description—wife-beating, gambling, robbery, burglary, sand-bagging and assaults upon life and property. In view of such a result as this, which high license has always effected where it has been tried, and in view of the small number of the little moral saloons [illegible] where liquor is sold in this community, Messrs. C. & G. and the other prominent dealers are hardly warranted in opposing high license. Indeed, they could richly afford to pay the licenses of these little moralists, if they were [illegible], for the sake of closing up the low dens. They certainly have the interests of the city at heart, and ought to know that every vile groggery wiped out is equivalent to the addition of a policeman to the force, and that if they were all wiped out it would be for the benefit of the decent places, which could readily afford to pay the high fee and thus provide the city with needed revenue without taxing the necessary and legitimate business of the city to protect it from the dangers incurred on account of these very dens.

CITY

[illegible] ELOPEMENT.—A gentleman who came up the river on the Fleetwood yesterday from [illegible] furnishes the following particulars of the elopement of a young couple from Lewis river [illegible] Tuesday night. Miss Mary Miller, daughter of [illegible] settler of Lewis river [illegible] retired to her room as usual but failed to make her appearance yesterday morning at the breakfast table [illegible] went to the girl's room, found that the bed had not been occupied that night and that not only her [illegible] but all her clothes and valuables [illegible] missing. The gentleman above referred to [illegible] recognized on board the Fleetwood John Stratton, a young man from Lewis river, who [illegible] at all [illegible] and kept himself out of sight as much as possible. Having heard the story of the missing girl, the [illegible] elopement and [illegible] face to face with Stratton, [illegible] much confused and gave [illegible] reasons for his trip to Portland. When [illegible] reached this city young Stratton went [illegible] with a lady closely veiled and took a hack [illegible] up-town hotel. The purser then asked [illegible] the names of John Stratton and Miss Mary Miller were on his books. Examination [illegible] failed to find them, but there appeared the names of Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, whose description answered to that of young Stratton and Miss Miller. It is understood that the young couple took the legal steps [illegible] evening necessary for the marriage ceremony, and are probably ere this man and wife. Mr. Miller, when [illegible] that her daughter had probably eloped with young Stratton, [illegible] the elopement entirely unnecessary as, although they [illegible] encouraged the young man's [illegible], neither [illegible] be her husband would have opposed the marriage.

THE TROUT QUESTION.—Three magnificent trout displayed on a platter in the window of a First street restaurant yesterday attracted the attention of [illegible] E. Syber, who, feeling certain that [illegible] trout and therefore could not [illegible] in the possession of the [illegible] of [illegible]. A warrant procured [illegible] placed in the hands of Constable Sprague, [illegible] had not been served [illegible] at latest accounts [illegible] prosecuting [illegible] had not been [illegible]. The trout were [illegible] and in fine condition. There are but few [illegible] among the Rod and Gun Club, [illegible] in the vicinity of a stream [illegible] found. The restraints [illegible] would have no effect on a man who [illegible] one of these, and the [illegible] to fight it out on that line if it took [illegible]. It will be a good thing when the difference between mountain trout and salmon trout [illegible] that the salmon trout is a different species from the mountain [illegible] is doubted by some, [illegible] caught while fishing for salmon [illegible]. In this connection it is proper to [illegible] that there are some half dozen disreputable [illegible] of the lowest class of French [illegible] known to be violating the game laws [illegible] and other small streams, [illegible] with the rod and line, net the [illegible]. It is to be hoped that [illegible] be detected and punished, and [illegible] streams should keep a [illegible] for such conscientious violators of [illegible] law, both of order and decency, and endeavor [illegible]

[illegible]—The absconding New York [illegible] Julius Marcus, who was arrested the [illegible] by Chief of Police Lappeus upon a telegram [illegible] authorities, was yesterday [illegible] upon a writ of habeas corpus [illegible] in the state circuit court. [illegible] by the chief and by District [illegible] behalf of the state. In [illegible] the court held that a telegram [illegible] of law and insufficient to hold [illegible] appeal to the supreme court was [illegible] by both Chief Lappeus and the [illegible] of the same served upon Marcus, [illegible] into custody. He was then [illegible] Judge [illegible], who, upon the filing of a [illegible] in the sum of $10,000 for ap[illegible] court, again released him [illegible] of liberty.

[illegible]—A large parcel of woman's [illegible] found hidden in the lumber [illegible] and brought to the police [illegible] yesterday morning. SMALLPOX INVESTIGATION.

Dr. John English, Captain Gritzmacher and B. F. Goodwin Testify before the Council Committee Last Evening.

The council committee on judiciary and health and police met last evening pursuant to adjournment and continued the taking of testimony in the smallpox investigation.

Dr. John English was the first witness sworn, and testified as follows: On the 11th of January Capt. Gorman, of the Norton house, brought a man to Wallace's drug store and said he wished me to examine him; I took the man into the back room and made the usual examination, asking him if he had been vaccinated, or had the measles, how long he had been ill, etc.; he stated that he had had measles, had been vaccinated; had not been exposed to the smallpox to his knowledge; said he had no backache or headache, but did complain of a slight cough and attributed most of his bad feeling to his extreme seasickness coming up. What was particularly noticeable in the case was the lack of general prostration and the general redness of the surface of the body. There was not as much roughness of the surface as was to be expected in that stage of smallpox. He was completely covered with eruptions. I gave the matter more attention under the circumstances than I should have done had I not seen an item in THE OREGONIAN the morning before, stating that there was a case of smallpox on the Oregon. The opinion I formed was that at that stage it was impossible to form a positive diagnosis of the disease. I had seen similar eruptions of a mild character. I suggested, however, that the man be taken to Dr. Wells, as it was a serious thing to say that a man had smallpox. The man came into the drug store afterward and sat down. When the smallpox case was reported in Walla Walla, Capt. Gorman and I looked at the hotel register and found a man had registered by the name of Thompson, but he did not occupy the same room where the sick man had been.

Captain Gritzmacher, of the police force, sworn, testified: In the forenoon some time of the 11th of January I was called to the telephone. Some one asked for the chief, but he was out. The party talking then asked for me, and said to come up or send some one to Dr. Wells' office immediately; there was a man there to be taken charge of. I went up myself. Dr. Wells took me into his private office and said Capt. Gorman had brought a man up whom he suspected had the smallpox. The doctor said he had a family practice and did not care much about examining the man or treating him, and wished me to take him to the health officer. He said he was no expert in such cases and did not want to pronounce upon it. He then showed me the man in another room. I asked the doctor if the case didn't look a good deal like the measles, and the man said he had had the measles. The doctor again said he would not pronounce upon the case. I took the man away and over to the office. The chief had just come in. I told him about the case. He asked me what Dr. Wells said about it. I told him the doctor was non-committal. The chief examined the man, asking him all the usual questions and finally let him go, telling him, however, that he had better go to the hospital for a few days and not travel in his condition. The man said he didn't want to do that, as there was a crowd of them together bound for the upper country and he wanted to go with them. He said he didn't feel sick at all, so we let him go. I am under the impression that he gave his name as Allen, and said he came from Texas.

B. F. Goodwin sworn, testified: Am a policeman and acting clerk of the police department. I was present at the time Chief Lappeus examined the man Capt. Gritzmacher brought from Dr. Wells' office. The chief asked me what I thought of the man. I looked at him and felt of his wrists and said I thought he had the measles or a rash and not the smallpox. The chief asked the man if he had any head ache or back ache, and he said no. The chief advised him to go to some hospital. He said he couldn't do it, as he was with a party and wanted to go to the upper country with them. He insisted on going away, and the chief let him go. I have had considerable experience in smallpox cases. I did not find smallpox symptoms on this man.

The committee then adjourned to meet to-morrow evening at 7:30.

BRIEF MENTION.

"The White Slave" to-night.

Next Sunday being Palm Sunday, no concert will be given at New Market.

The Vancouver steam ferry will commence making regular trips on Sunday morning.

A patent has been granted to A. J. Burr, of Olympia, for a roller dredge. What is a roller dredge?

Hotels of all classes in the city are again filled to overflowing and transient travelers experience difficulty in obtaining accommodations.

Dr. J. B. Pilkington will deliver the third lecture on social science at the Unitarian church to-morrow evening. Subject, "Use and Abuse of the Eye."

Dave Lavin, one of the shining lights of the Free Whisky association, disgusted with the new license law, has left for Chicago or some other place. His saloon has been attached by Walter Bros., to whom he was indebted in the sum of $425.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The White Slave" is drawing good audiences at New Market and will run through this week, including Saturday matinee. Hitches incidental to first nights are no longer noticeable and the scenic effects are very creditable. Among the cast deserving more than passing notice are Miss Osborne, who has a strong scene in the 5th act and does it very well, and Mr. Wilkins, who as Wm. Lacy, the brainless young planter, fills the part without overdoing it, and Mr. Thayer, who carries the comedy of the piece in the character of Mr. Stitch, a lawyer.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Megler of Brookfield are at the Esmond.

W. E. White of the California Grocer and Canner is in the city.

Dr. G. O. Ashby and family of Salem passed through the city yesterday en route to Seattle where Dr. Ashby has located and will practice his profession, dentistry.

Dr. and Mrs. James Browne last night entertained very cordially and gracefully the class of the medical college and a number of other friends. A very pleasant evening was spent by all present.

"THE LAST VULGARISM."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

May I be allowed a word in your columns for the purpose of trying to save our common language from a form of speech that is growing more and more common every day, and which a recent writer in Temple Bar characterizes as "the last and worst vulgarism of these evil days." I refer to the use of the adverb between the infinitive mood and its sign. This is quite a recent fashion, especially among newspaper writers, and one very much to be regretted by all who care for beauty and correctness in our common language. I give the following specimens, which I have taken from contemporaneous and widely known journals, eastern and western: "To humbly submit," "to occasionally consult," "to boldly deny," "the failure to ever build up," "to utterly confound," "to substantially abolish," "to simultaneously disarm," "to again enjoy," "to at once engage," &c., &c. Among the many evils that flesh is heir to, may not we be spared this [illegible] in our daily reading.

ACCOMMODATION TRAIN.

The West Side Road will Put On an Extra Passenger between Portland and McMinnville.

The Oregon and California railroad announces that on Monday, April 2d, they will run an extra passenger daily between this city and McMinnville, arriving here in the morning and leaving in the afternoon. This move is made upon numerous applications from residents along the line of the road, and is only an experiment. If the train pays anything above running expenses, it will be made permanent; if not, after a few months' trial, it will be discontinued. Passenger travel on the road during 1882 was much larger than the year before, and it is believed with the reduced rates established several months ago, the train will pay, and still not take away much from the through trains. People along the line complain that to come to Portland and transact any business, they are required to stay two nights and one day. With this arrangement they will travel much oftener than heretofore, and the arrangement will be of mutual advantage. Following is the time card for principal stations:

SOUTH BOUND.		NORTH BOUND.
Portland	5:00 P M	McMinnville	5:45 A M
Hillsboro	6:[illegible] P M	North Yamhill	6:[illegible] A M
Cornelius	6:25 P M	Forest Grove	6:56 A M
Forest Grove	[illegible] P M	Cornelius	7:11 A M
North Yamhill	7:[illegible] P M	Hillsboro	7:22 A M
McMinnville	8:00 P M	Portland	8:30 A M

The regular mail train south bound on and after the 2d proximo will leave Portland at 9 A. M. and arrive at Corvallis at [illegible] P. M. No change in other trains.

This train will be no little accommodation to South Portland, and if there is enough demand, stops will be made at the switch beyond the North street bridge.

SALEM NOTES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

FROM THE FRONT.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

HORSE PLAINS, M. T., March 7.

Two trains are busy hauling gravel for ballasting and surfacing.

About [illegible] and 200 white men have gone below to repair damages.

John [illegible], at one time with Riffle's party, has a surveying party of his own.

Carpenters are busy putting up a few more trusses [illegible]

Construction trains are now running eight miles from here to a point known as Last Chance.

J. C. Kinnard, who has been dangerously ill for three weeks, is around and attending to his business again.

R. R. Burke, of Dayton, W. T., is [illegible] the front some entertainment by auctioneering some of his wares.

Weather very mild, snow has all disappeared in the valley and everything has a look of balmy spring.

Emmet Ryan, formerly clerk for W. J. Quirk at the front, has accepted a like position with [illegible], Smith & Co.

Sargent, Morris & Kinney are shipping logs and flour from Dayton, W. T. They are represented here by Thomas [illegible].

M. Slater, a prominent attorney, formerly of Salem, has accepted a position as time keeper at Third crossing [illegible] his friend.

Savage & [illegible] have a house here where they do a general [illegible] business. [illegible] firm has several [illegible]

The Western Union telegraph company have extended their line to this point. James Fish is agent. By the middle of next week they will be at Paradise station.

James Gibbons, who was shot in the knee by unknown parties New Year's night, [illegible] He went to Spokane Falls for treatment.

One evening the first [illegible] express letters came through from Portland for several days. The express was carried by messengers on foot a distance of some forty miles.

This afternoon [illegible] Chinaman fell off the trestle at Last Chance, sustaining a compound fracture of his leg. His injuries were of such a serious nature that he died during the night.

Two shifts are running now, day and night, hauling gravel [illegible]. [illegible] an hour during the day is an idle one. The company have very kind, obliging and courteous employes.

M. M. Splawn, working in the gravel pit, was accidentally struck on the head this morning with a shovel in the hands of a celestial, cutting a deep and painful gash, though not serious.

Frank Riffle, engineer, and party leave for Colfax on a surveying tour in a few days. Mrs. Riffle will go east. Both Mr. and Mrs. Riffle have the best wishes of their friends here, and will be missed very much.

Eddy, Hammond & Co. have removed their store from Weeksville to this place, where they are putting in a heavy stock, their object being to make this the distributing quarters for their mills and branch stores.

Tom Shea, who shot himself accidentally in the foot about two months ago, will have to suffer amputation of that member. The ball at that time could not be found. He leaves for Walla Walla in a few days for St. Mary's hospital.

At camp 21 a heavy blast was let off. Tom Armstrong, a laborer, in endeavoring to get out of the way, was knocked down and trampled on by a horseman. Emil [illegible] was called and dressed his injuries. He reports bruises simply, no fractures nor dislocations.

The bridge at the crossing is finished. Fears were entertained that it would not be finished for three or four weeks, but through Hallett's superintendency it was ready and trains crossed within ten days from the time he took charge. The temporary bridge was abandoned.

The end of this month will finish the grading to Third crossing, 14 miles from here. Astounding changes are promised, and no doubt there will be some rattling among dry bones, and many will take a trip up Salt creek. J. B. P. Weeks, division engineer, is spoken of as next superintendent.

Rumor has it that Assistant Superintendent J. N. Fordyce has resigned. Your correspondent interviewed that gentleman but he says there is no cause for any such rumor. I am glad of it and trust Mr. Fordyce will continue to hold the responsible position he occupies. I have ever found him an obliging and affable gentleman, ever working for the company he represents.

Dr. I. E. Cohen, surgeon for O. R. & N. Co., Portland, has succeeded Drs. Harvey and Littlefield. Dr. Cohen is ably assisted by Dr. H. [illegible], who is an eastern gentleman of much experience in hospital affairs. He was at one time resident physician and surgeon to St. Mary's hospital, Salt Lake City. He proves himself a careful surgeon. Every department in the hospital at Weeksville has been thoroughly overhauled, fresh drugs ordered and pleasant changes made. Both surgeons are well liked on the road.

Capt. L. W. Cook has a company of soldiers at Third crossing; object to keep down riot and prevent sale of liquors to the men on the reservation. Capt. Cook is an old soldier, having gone through several Indian fights. He is a very courteous gentleman, an entertaining companion and fearless soldier. Fred. Reed was the recipient from the captain's hands of a set of leggings, which are trophies of the Apache war. They are beautifully worked, Indian style, with colored beads and are certainly a fine souvenir and acceptable gift.

Horse Plains presents a very animated appearance. A large water tank has been built, a station house and warehouse are now in course of construction. There is a long side track and spur. On the spur stand the express car, with J. C. Richards as agent, and also the car of James Fish, the agent of the company. [illegible] has his camp pitched here. His men are busy surfacing and ballasting. Mr. [illegible] has charge of this special piece of work and does his work well. Wood is very scarce here, it having to be hauled on cars several miles.

A few mornings since Last Chance was all excited over an elopement, the actors being J. M. Comparet and a Mrs. Carrell. Comparet was the captain of the vigilantes and considered an honorable man. He conducted a variety store here. Mrs. Carrell is the wife of a cook, a hard-working, industrious man. She has quite a history and is considered a bold adventuress. Comparet left without settling sundry bills. He is about six feet tall, black side-whiskers and moustache, dark eyes, wore a grey suit and fur cap when last seen. He has a faculty of making acquaintances easily and is a good talker. They were in the vicinity of Sprague at last accounts.

A few days ago Charles Redcliffe got into an altercation with a barkeeper named Collins. During the fuss Collins struck Radcliffe over the head with a shovel, and then threw him out into the street. Such sights being quite common no attention was paid to the unfortunate man until the following day, when he was removed to the company's hospital. He died during the night, and an examination revealed the fact that he died of cerebral hemorrhage, caused by the blow he received. No inquest was held, and parties are in pursuit of Collins, but of course he never will be caught. Radcliffe was at one time brakeman on a construction train. He was not of a quarrelsome nature, but of late had been addicted to hard drinking.

This valley is very fertile, needing no grubbing, no extra labor to cultivate the ground save plowing. It is free from rocks and other like obstructions, perfectly level and easily irrigated. A splendid creek runs on one side of it and the Clark's Fork on the other. Many have even now enclosed farms and expect to remain and cultivate. The mountains abound with game, deer, mountain goats and sheep. Every restaurant is supplied. The mountain sheep is splendid eating, being preferred to deer. A species of deer known as mule deer is frequently caught. They bear some resemblance to the former but are much larger and very timid. Grouse and pheasants give sport to the hunter. Settlers say that the creeks abound with delicious trout.

One of the Walla Walla papers, which is gifted with a sensational reporter delighting in writing up items that never happened at the front. All items appearing in the columns of THE OREGONIAN, emanating from its local correspondent, can be relied on. Pains are taken to get at facts only. That paper states that smallpox had broken out on Horse Plains, and is fast spreading among camps. For the benefit of friends, wives and mothers, who have their relatives working on this line, I will say have no fears; pay no attention to such articles. Smallpox has not attacked a single railroad man, nor has it got into any camps. True, there is smallpox about 35 miles from here. It is at a sawmill known as Stevens' mill. There have been two deaths, both white men. The smallpox of Weeksville is a thing of the past. The patients are gone and the pest house burned to the ground.

THE HIGH LICENSE ORDINANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

It is the most judicious course to discuss some of the features of the high license ordinance, recently passed by the city council of Portland, without a resort to abusive language such as would be likely to rouse and foster the ill feelings of one class of persons against another. Nothing superior to harmony aids the accomplishment of man's designs.

In Portland rising as it is from chaos into the effulgence of thrift, wealth, progress and beauty, there are sufficient inducements now laid with its being to cause a brotherly feeling to animate all its citizens, and temporary causes of disagreement, such as the one now spoken of, should be considered in a scholarly, sensible manner.

It is fair to conclude that the council [illegible] the [illegible] of public criticism on the principal feature of the ordinance, which induced its hasty action in the case without having given previous notice. In legislation of any kind proceedings of this nature are very unwise. It may be called [illegible] legislation, and like an outburst in the [illegible] can not become permanent. The high license on the sale of liquors will operate grievously against two portions of the people directly: Saloonkeepers, or retailers, and their patrons, the consumers. In an indirect manner it will be felt by many others. Prices must be raised, profits lowered, or worse than all, the [illegible] of the articles sold will be largely [illegible].

If there is anything more reprehensible than another it is the sale of adulterated articles of food or drink; and those who have been selected to watch over the interests of the people are surely not worthy to continue in such positions if they permit any regulation to pass tending towards that end; or, if they do not wisely provide such laws as shall place the best articles in the market at the lowest rates possible. Inadvertently this action of the council has instituted a phase of class legislation for persons who can afford to purchase and store choice brands of liquors in their houses [illegible] its effects, while the laboring classes, or so many of them as are poor, must suffer the consequences.

The independent man is entitled to have what he needs within the law, and the workingman should also be afforded the means to secure his requirements on the same grounds. This is equity. The legislation which fails to do this is narrow and [illegible], and the man who is unable to forget party lines for the general welfare, or to see how he can enact laws that will beneficially reach every class of his constituents, should gather the folds of his toga around him and retire into obscurity; or, if he still be ambitious of courting fame, let him go down to the market place and engage in the honest calling of a butcher's boy. Men's tastes are more or less regulated by their income, and you cannot place them all on the same social status. You must, therefore, ascertain what may be good for him who is at the foot of the ladder as well as for him who has reached the top. We can forgive fanaticism on account of mistaken zeal. Prejudices may be overlooked because they are more injurious to those who entertain them than to the persons against whom they have been directed, but a legislator who fails to be wise is inexcusable.

If the ordinance referred to was directed against the low dives of the city, it is wrong in principle, because in aiming to kill a skunk one should not kill a man. In other words, some method which would not interfere with the principle of so large a number of the people should have been selected for the suppression of the objectionable places named.

There has been an exaggerated view of the evils of liquor selling going the rounds of the country, which has been supported by temperance men. No one would find fault with this as a mere matter of opinion; but when the social rights of the people have been usurped or set aside on the grounds that they must live just as the temperance people desire, it is time to enter a protest against this state of things. We should rather endeavor to give assistance to every one in the sphere of life in which they live, seeing if we could not give them better food and drink; teaching them what to do in order to be good and wise, and drawing them gradually out of the broad path by kindness and humanity. This is the only way men can be permanently benefited. This is the way by which we can build up a great nation whose people shall be united in one bond of universal brotherhood.

Another Step in Advance!

Keeping Pace with the Times!

Goods for the Northwestern Coast Market direct from the Factories.

A history of the FARMERS AND MECHANICS' STORE having already appeared in full in our catalogues, which found circulation all over the Northwest Coast, it is unnecessary to reiterate its trials and combats. We, like many others, began our career with a limited capital; though, unlike many others, we always pursued from the very beginning a liberal policy in our relations with our patrons. We were, like many others are to-day, compelled to be a vassal to the close-fisted San Francisco merchant; though, unlike those many others, we always gave our customers the full benefit of the fluctuations in the market. That our style of transacting business met with the approval of the people is self-evident, from the fact that our efforts have raised us to a level where competition is unable to reach us, and where we can, with perfect safety to ourselves and benefit to the public, make a still greater departure from the old traditional mode of doing business. The senior partner of the firm, Mr. Louis Prager, has just returned from an extended tour through the East, where he has effected arrangements with the largest manufacturers, that has placed us in a position to offer our goods at San Francisco wholesale rates. Our facilities for cheap transportation from the East are the same as the largest importer in San Francisco can boast of. In a word, we MANUFACTURE OUR OWN CLOTHING, purchase our DRY GOODS FROM FIRST HAND, and will sell them at WHOLESALE FIGURES. Our rates on Groceries will fluctuate with the rates on exchange, always giving the customer the benefit of a decline.

The ONE PRICE feature of our establishment is a recognized factor in our success, and we shall preserve it in all its stringency, inasmuch as we shall henceforth return change to the minimum amount of 1 cent.

What we are promising the people is not mere bombast set up in large type to attract the unwary, but is simply that which we purpose honestly to do. We are at any time prepared to redeem our promise to the strictest sense of the letter and substantiate any and all assertions.

We shall in the near future publish in these columns a list of prices, which will at once convince the public of our sincerity.

Our Price Current at the head of our column will show from day to day the fluctuations of staple Groceries.

The Daily Oregonian.

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 15, 1883.

NELL AND CHRIS.

There were only seven of us—all girls—in the dear old parsonage at Wrayburn, where papa had lived for thirty years.

Under the daisies, in the pretty country churchyard dear mamma had slept ever since Kate was a wee baby, and Aunt Jane had come to care for the motherless children of her brother as soon as the calamity fell upon him.

We are a rosy-cheeked, healthy set of girls, rather goodlooking, Nell being our beauty and I the only invalid.

I am a cripple, but I am not going to bother you with my story, excepting as my observations are recorded.

It was in the spring, and my sisters and Aunt Jane were very busy with housework.

I was in my room, knitting; papa about disconsolate at the invasion of his study, and consequent interruption of his literary work, when the murmur of voices from the porch floated up to me, and I mentally exclaimed, "Dear me! Chris is proposing to Nell again."

"And nobody ever will, or ever can love you, as I do," Chris was saying, when Nell's voice struck in.

"There, that window fairly dazzles you! Who says I can't clean glass? Oh, I beg your pardon, Chris. No, of course!"

"But, Nell, do listen me!"

"Chris, did you ask me to marry you when I was in my cradle? I am sure you have asked me once a week ever since. I won't, you know, or ought to know, by this time. Why can't you ask somebody else, just for variety? I am sure any of the other girls will make a much better wife than I will; that is," said Nell, with a sudden spasm of loyalty for the rest of us, "if any of them would take you."

"How can I care for anyone else when my whole heart has been yours all my life?" said Chris, disconsolately. "It is cruel to trifle so with true love."

"Don't be an idiot," said Nell, sharply. "I never trifled with you! I told you that you were a horrid boy, and I would never marry you, when you used to steal apples to present to me, and I never, never told you anything else."

"No," sighed Chris.

"Then why don't you let me alone?"

Her Aunt Jane, her head tied up in a manner that defies description, came upon the scene with, "Oh, here's Christ Chris, do run over to Smith's and get me a paper of carpet tacks."

Chris departed.

Presently Smith's boy brought the carpet tacks, and Nell was set alone for the remainder of that day as far as Chris was concerned.

The next day the cleaning went forward briskly, but it was still early in the morning when Nell came to my room equipped for a walk.

"Any letters?" she asked, carelessly. "I am going down the street."

"None," I said; "I did not think you could be spared."

"Aunt Jane is rather grumpy about it," said Nell, adjusting a coquettish wreath of apple blossoms upon her hat, "but I want to get the smell of soapsuds out of my nose. I may stop at Gilmore's; have you any message?"

"Only my love to Mrs. Gilmore."

Now, Mrs. Gilmore was the mother of Nell's persistent adorer, Christopher Nelson Gilmore, and the families had been intimate for years.

Still, for Nell to take the middle of housecleaning week to call on Mrs. Gilmore was a little out of order.

She flitted away, her sunny curls dancing on the soft May breeze, and I, putting two and two together, remembered that Chris had not been in the house for twenty-four hours.

Vainly I tried to recall a similar interval when he was in Wrayburn.

School, college business had called him out of the village, but his home hours were always fairly divided between his mother's house and ours.

Something must be the matter!

I thought of all possible and impossible catastrophes till I was not surprised to see our Nell coming in at the gate in a subdued frame of mind, apparent upon her pretty face.

She came directly to me, as they all do, even Aunt Jane and papa, in emergencies.

"Bell," she said, in a low, grave tone, "Chris has gone to Cape Town."

"Gone!" I cried. "Why he was here yesterday."

"He has gone to visit his uncle, the one who offered him a business opening some time ago. Chris did not want a business opening, as he has plenty of money; and, Belle, Mrs. Gilmore says its all my fault that she is left alone and childless."

"Scarcely your fault, dear," I said, my heart aching for the piteous strain in the sweet voice, the pain in the bright eyes. "You were right to refuse to marry a man you do not love."

But Nell only grew whiter and went slowly to her own room.

After that, in all the family lamentations for Chris, so many years a sort of adopted brother in our midst, Nell never spoke of him.

The next winter Meg, our eldest, was married; and, as if matrimony was a contagion, Jamey followed her example; then Maud, Lizzie, and even Kate, our baby.

Nell, the prettiest, sweetest of all, had offers in abundance, spent two winters visiting Meg, and by all accounts, captivating hearts by scores, but coming back to be the life and brightness of our home.

"There must be one old maid in every family," she said; and when I suggested my eminent fitness for the position, she smiled softly and said, "Mr. Brooks says you are the household angel, so please let us hear no more nonsense."

"There is Aunt Jane, too," I said mildly.

"Belle," she said, severely, "will you stop talking nonsense! Aunt Jane, indeed!"

It really did seem as if Nell was in earnest about a single life, but, after all, she was only twenty-four, and looked about seventeen, when one day, who should walk into the parsonage parlor, as coolly as if he had left it the day before, but Chris.

We were all there as he came in, but before he had spoken to Aunt Jane I saw that Nell had vanished.

Did Chris see her run out of the door as he entered the front window?

I think he did.

There was a subdued twinkle in his eyes as he inquired for my infirmities, not at all consistent with his words of sympathy.

Presently Nell came in with a quiet smile of greeting, and a perfect composure of manner, but Chris was a match for her.

It was as good as a play to watch those two, so completely did they ignore the fact that he was a discarded lover who had been sent away by her cruelty.

They conversed easily and gracefully—Christopher's African experiences, varied by descriptions of the family weddings, the new homes, the brothers-in-law, the children, and a thousand other details, in which our caller expressed the greatest interest.

After that he dropped in as of old, making himself agreeable and useful to everyone in the house, especially tender, as he ever had been, to me.

Indeed, I found myself wondering sometimes if he was going to take Nell's mocking advice, and, all the others being appropriated offer himself to me.

He took me for long drives in his mother's pony-carriage, and was always ready to hear of Nell's conquests, showing no jealousy, but a great deal of amusement, over her coquetries.

"She was a born coquette!" he said, once; "and yet nobody can call Nell vain. It has been a matter of course to her to be admired ever since she could run alone."

"She is our beauty now, as of old," I answered; and Chris assented cordially.

"I have seen no face so winsome since I left home," he said; but he spoke with the frank admiration of a brother and gave no token of a love sick swain.

Had he outlived his love, I wondered, and come home to prove to Nell that her days of tyranny were over?

I think Nell suspected that he had.

Always even tempered Nell became fitful and capricious, bright and laughing when Chris was with us, often silent and sometimes gloomy when she thought herself unnoticed.

She lost her color, and I caught her more than once rubbing her cheeks when going down stairs to see Chris, and she was snappish and deeply repentant therefor a dozen times a day.

"What ails Nell?" Aunt Jane asked me, anxious for her darling. "She eats nothing, Belle, and I am sure does not sleep well. I wonder if it would do her any good to spend a few weeks with Kate?"

Nell, on being consulted, caught eagerly at the suggestion and hurried her wardrobe into a trunk as if answering a sudden death summons.

She made no farewells, but flitted off so abruptly that it made us all stare with surprise.

"Elinor was always impulsive," papa said.

And Aunt Jane only answered, "But, bless me, I didn't mean to drive the child out of the house!"

Chris said nothing, but I was certainly convinced of the reality of his whiskers, so ferociously were they pulled all the evening.

But the next day Mrs. Gilmore sent over a wee note of dire distress.

Chris had been thrown from his horse, and the doctors feared some spinal injury.

Aunt Jane went over at once, and came back with a grave face.

"He is badly hurt—entirely unconscious," she said.

If Nell's departure was sudden, her return was not less so.

"Did you take off your hat at Kate's?" I inquired, with mild sarcasm, but regretted it when Nell's arms stole around my neck, and a face wet with tears was pressed against my own.

"Will he die?" she whispered. "Oh, Belle, what shall I do if he dies?"

Then, as if ashamed of letting even my loving eyes read her secret, she rushed away and locked herself in her room.

Such restless misery followed that my heart ached for her.

She and Aunt Jane spent almost all their time at Mrs. Gilmore's and undertook the housekeeping herself, leaving papa [illegible] nothing of his sister's care.

But she seemed to live in a sort of breathless expectation of the news from Chris.

Worse! worse! very low! such were the disheartening tidings day after day, until there came one dreadful night of agonized watching, and Chris changed for the better.

Convalescence was slow and tedious; but one day, when we were all in the drawing room, there was a soft rush across the room on the porch, down the garden, and a joyous ring in Nell's voice, crying, "Oh, Chris!—dear Chris!—are you really here again?"

Then I saw him leaning one hand on her shoulder, one on his cane, as he came feebly up the path, pale, thin and weak, but Chris restored to us.

Spring came round once more, and Nell and Aunt Jane busied themselves with the usual extra housework.

Once more voices floated up to me from the porch.

"You were cleaning those windows when I went away, Nell."

"Please, Chris, don't," Nell pleaded.

"Don't repeat the offense for which I was banished, Nell. But I must, darling. It is for the last time."

"Hush!" I whispered at this crisis, as Aunt Jane entered my room. "Chris is proposing to Nell."

"Well," said my aunt, "that is an old story."

"But she has accepted him," I said exultingly, as a faint "Yes, dear Chris; I know now you are the only man I could ever love," stole up to me.

"Ahem!" said Aunt Jane. "You and I, Belle, will be the old maids of the family after all."

And Aunt Jane was right.

Dear papa says—I know it was only his kindness, but it is pleasant to hear—that he could not spare the last of his girls to any husband.

AFTERNOON DISPATCHES

Preparing for the Wedding.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., March 13.—All arrangements for the Davis-Burr wedding are completed. The ceremony will occur a little before noon to-morrow. The steamer Marchison which was to have gone down the river to-day, held back at the request of Col. Green, another boat taking her place. She will carry the bridal party to Wilmington to-morrow. Men have been busy all day preparing the boat for the distinguished visitors. The stateroom that the Judge and his bride will occupy, the ladies cabin and the dining saloon will be trimmed with holly and arbor-vitae, and the whole boat has been scrubbed up and put in good order. The towns people are taking more interest in the matter than in anything else that has happened since Sherman's army arrived here eighteen years ago. The bride is a lady of about 36 years, weighs 150 or 160 pounds, and is well proportioned. She is dark complexioned, and though not beautiful, would everywhere be noticed as a handsome woman overflowing with kindheartedness. Her most salient characteristics are a dislike of ostentation and eagerness to be of service to everyone in sickness or in trouble. Her father, Capt. Burr, was a sea captain. He went west and settled at Bloomington, Ill., where he now lives, almost directly across the street from his distinguished son-in-law. Miss Burr lived as an adopted daughter of Col. Greene, of this city, whose wife is a sister of Capt. Burr. Miss Burr was visiting her parents during the illness of the first Mrs. Davis, and by her kind attention to the invalid greatly endeared herself to Mrs. Davis and the Judge.

A Brutal Officer.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—Elijah Delahoof was beaten in a most brutal manner this evening by a policeman, receiving injuries which may prove fatal. Returning home from work, he heard his wife screaming, and saw her roughly handled. He remonstrated with the officer and demanded an explanation. The latter turned upon him and beat him with his club over the head and when Delahoof started to run, fired a shot at him.

Rendezvous of the Fleet.

NEW ORLEANS, March 14.—The United States man-of-war Tennessee, Admiral Cooper commanding, flag ship of the South Atlantic squadron, will reach here late to-night. She will remain sometime—until the arrival of the remainder of the squadron, including the Yantic, Alliance, Swatara, Kearsarge and Vandalia, which will rendezvous here the coming week. The fleet come from all directions, some vessels having been at Mobile, others at Curacoa and others at Cayenne, French Guinea.

Reached the Highest Point.

VICKSBURG, March 14.—Reporters of the Herald have returned from a trip up the river and report the water on a stand at Greenville, with a gradual decline above and scarcely any rise at points below. Planters generally along the river have made considerable progress ploughing, and except where the overflow has affected them, are in good spirits. The water pouring through breaks at Goodrich is not one-fifth as great as that which passed through last year, and is passing off rapidly.

Parisian Matters.

PARIS, March 14.—The report that President Grevy contemplates resigning is pronounced a malicious invention intended to encourage Orleanist intrigues. The cabinet resolved to instruct the prosecution of any one at a public meeting inciting murder and pillage.

Sentenced.

MONTREAL, March 14.—E. A. Duchane, the broker, extradited to Belgium for swindling his clients, has been sentenced to a year's imprisonment. His wife received the same punishment as an accomplice.

Pugilistic.

NEW YORK, March 14.—Billy Edwards, the pugilist, had a great benefit last night, in Madison Square garden. Sullivan said if Fox would bring along his big stiff (Slade), with money, he would accommodate him.

Germans will be Protected.

BERLIN, March 14.—In the event of a war with Madagascar, a man-of-war will be sent to protect German interests.

A Colored Vice-President.

PANAMA, March 14.—A black man named Ruize, has been elected vice-president of the Colombian senate.

The Fishery Exhibit.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—G. B. Goode, of the National museum, has been selected to take charge of the fishery exhibit at London.

Madagascar Wants Help.

VIENNA, March 14.—Madagascar requests England and Germany to intervene in the event of the Lombarding of Tamative by the French.

Money to Ireland.

The land league president states that $2473 have been sent to Ireland during the past week, making a total of $19,224.

THE EAST SIDE.

G. A. R.

Evidences of the growth of East Portland indicate decreased dependence upon Portland, and probably no better demonstration of this fact can be found than in the large number of lodges of beneficiary orders that have recently sprung into existence here. Keeping pace with the growth the G. A. R. now propose to fall in line and organize at an early day, and a preliminary meeting to consider the matter is called for Friday evening next at the office of Prettyman & Orelts, on I street, between Fourth and Fifth. There are now twenty-six members of the G. A. R. residing in East Portland who are the officers of the post in Portland, and in addition to these there exist also thirty eligible citizens who, it is understood, would be willing to join in a post on this side of the river. Those competent to speak in the matter anticipate the organization of a post some time next week, and that on Decoration day it will be able to turn out at least fifty members. All honorably discharged soldiers and sailors [illegible] should not fail to be present at the meeting [illegible] announced.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE SERVICE.

A delegation of ladies from the Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold a service in the M. E. church next Sunday night at half past seven. A cordial invitation to all.

A FEARFUL FALL.

A Chinaman engaged in putting up a sign on the [illegible] I street yesterday [illegible] fell to the sidewalk below, a distance of about twenty feet, [illegible] [illegible] place, and [illegible] A physician [illegible] chances of recovery appear to be against him.

NOTES.

[illegible] East Portland was taken suddenly ill Sunday morning, and [illegible] symptoms of [illegible] fever. It is feared she will not be able to resume her duties for some time, if at all.

The public meeting of the [illegible] the improvement of the Base Line road, will take place at Neighbor's hall Saturday afternoon [illegible] instead of [illegible] evening as previously announced.

The new Masonic [illegible] will be ready for occupancy by Saturday next.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE, DIABETES, KIDNEY, LIVER or URINARY DISEASES.

Have no fear of any of these diseases if you use Hop Bitters, as they will prevent and cure the worst cases, even when you have been made worse by some great puffed up pretended cure.

ALBANY NEWS.

(FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.)

ALBANY, Or., March 14.

Wheat for seed (California) is selling at $1 25 per bushel.

Judge Woodward of Portland is in attendance at court, in connection with the Wachenheimer case.

A little two year old son of G. W. Parks fell into the canal last Sunday morning, but was rescued from drowning by Mr. Lasley.

Mr. Abe Hackleman, who has been in this city for several weeks past looking after his property and other interests, left yesterday for his home in Eastern Oregon.

The ladies of the First Presbyterian church gave a supper and social last evening, in the old brick store, corner of First and Washington streets, which was well attended, and proved as gratifying, [illegible] these reunions usually are.

Ex Postmaster P. H. Raymond and family [illegible] their departure on Monday last. Their long residence in this city had made them many warm friends, a number of whom were at the depot to bid them good-bye. Salem is to be their abiding place for a time.

Frank Hackleman, aged 19, and Miss Martha Morgan, aged 16, were married in this city last Monday morning, their parents consenting. The youthful couple took passage by the noon train for Portland on a bridal tour. The bridegroom is a son of Abe Hackleman, formerly of this city, but now a resident of Eastern Oregon.

The annual school election for this district (No. 5) took place on Monday last. The total number of votes cast was 202. J. H. Burkhart was elected clerk by a majority of 77 votes over H. H. Hewett. R. S. Strahan and Thomas Monteith were elected directors, the former for three years and the latter for the unexpired term of E. P. [illegible] (one year). The clerkship will be worth this year about $600.

CAUGHT NAPPING.

A young gentleman of this city, who is at present engaged in the acquisition of legal lore, with a view to qualifying himself for the bar, went, few evenings since, to the office of the law firm with which he is studying, with the laudable intention of devoting an hour or so to the perusal of Blackstone or some other recognized legal authority. Having lighted the lamp, the young gent selected the softest chair, and, with feet elevated on the table, was soon intent on unraveling some of the many knotty problems which continually present themselves to the student of law. Whether it was owing to the quietude of his surroundings, or from a lack of interest in his favorite author, or from some other cause, this deponent saith not, but truth to tell, the y. g. fell asleep. After a time one of the partners called at the office and discovered the situation. Turning the light low, he quietly retreated, locking the door after him. Upon reaching the street he met some of the boys and told them how matters were. After having waited for some time without discovering any signs of returning consciousness on the part of the y. g. the boys came to the office in a body and commenced pounding on the door, at the same time shouting, "Fire! fire! fire!" The dedgeling lawyer, thus rudely awakened from a dream in which he thought he had won his first great case and was in a fair way to attain renown and affluence, at once lowered his pedal extremities and hurried to the door, which he found locked. After a short time, thinking the joke had gone far enough, his friends opened the door and enjoyed a laugh at his expense for having been fairly caught napping.

FOUR BAPTISMS.

The spectacle afforded by the immersion of two young women in the waters of the Santiam[illegible] at its intersection with Third street, attracted quite a large crowd at midday on Sunday last. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr Spriggs, of the Christian church at Salem. The rite was again administered at 10 o'clock on Monday morning, the candidate on that occasion being a man, and was repeated on Tuesday morning at the same hour and place, when a young girl was "buried with Christ in baptism." These have all joined the lately organized Christian church in this city, of which Rev. J. Duty is to be pastor.

G. A. R. BALL.

McPherson Post No. 5, G. A. R., gave their first ball last evening at the Depot hotel, in this city. The large dining room of the hotel was set apart for the occasion to the votaries of terpsichore, the arrangements were excellent, and everything passed off pleasantly, upwards of 70 couples participating in the dancing. About midnight the company adjourned to the parlors, while the tables were being spread for supper. After justice had been done the bountiful repast prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Gross for the occasion, dancing was resumed and continued through "the wee sma' hours ayont the twal."

Y. P. C. A.

At a regular monthly business meeting of the Young People's Christian Association, of this city the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months: President, Dr. G. W. Price, re-elected; vice president, Mrs. L. E. Blain; secretary, E. D. Haven; financial secretary, J. W. Blain; treasurer H. F. Merrill; chorister, Prof. J. D. Bobb; organist Miss M. L. Foster.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The circuit court for Linn county has been in session since Monday afternoon, Judge Boise presiding. There are 40 cases on the docket, a large number of which have already been disposed of. The court was occupied all day yesterday with the case of Mrs. E. B. Purdom vs. The City of Albany, suit for $5000 damages alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff about a year ago, through stepping off the sidewalk in the dark. The case was given to the jury this morning, the judge's summing up being decidedly against granting the damages asked for. The jury is still deliberating on a verdict.

Later by telegraph—Mrs. Purdom gets a verdict for $108.

Jos. Nimchick was arraigned this morning for the murder of Thos. Hay, at Scio, last October, and a jury is now being empanneled. He is defended by Messrs. R. S. Strahan, N. B. Humphrey, John Burnett, H. H. Hewett and H. Bryant.

The grand jury is composed of the following gentlemen: C. T. Lever, foreman, Geo. Overtor, E. L. Knox, W. J. Wilbanks, J. Shea, John Grisham, Geo. Archart.

Several witnesses in the case of A. Wachenheimer, charged with perjury, were examined before the grand jury, but nothing has yet transpired as to the result.

Col. J. McCraken, of Portland, is in attendance at court.

On Tuesday night of last week James Jackson, a half-breed, stabbed Indian Charlie near Cheney. A row was started in the Indian camp, the Indians having procured liquor. Charlie was cut in the back several times and is dangerously wounded. Jackson is under arrest.

Seattle Chronicle—One day last week while Ed. Williams was cruising for timber in the vicinity of the dismal swamp above Frank Dolan's place, on the Snoqualmie, he discovered hanging on a small sapling a roll of blankets, which, judging from papers, etc., found in them, belonged to a man by the name of Hayes, who one day in July, 1881, started to walk over the trail from Dolan's to Falls City. Never having been seen or heard of since, he undoubtedly lost his way and perished in the swamp.

Western Oregon.

Yaquina Post—Thirty or forty thousand feet of lumber has been received at the government works at South Beach, and the work of constructing the new wharf will commence at once, we suppose. We learn that work is pushing right along, and that it is expected to complete the breakwater, or nearly so, this season. If the calculation of the engineers holds good, we then shall have four feet more water on the bar than now—a total of twenty-our or twenty-five feet at high tide.

NEW YORK FREIGHTS AND MARKETS.

NEW YORK, March 14.—The clipper freight market is but moderately active, except for dead weight, of which offerings are in excess of requirements of the few ships in port. Among the late engagements of weight are 1800 tons of mauck iron, that has been contracted via Panama, but the contract will be received by the agent of the Union Pacific road, who has control of Pacific Mail. Ships in berth are not being pushed. The Al. M. Whiteimore is most advanced and will close out this week. The Vesuvius has nearly all her cargo engaged, but will be in berth 10 days yet. Rates are steady at last quotations. The supply of tonnage is still limited, but lots are most supplied for present requirements, although one of them may find it difficult next month, as no vessels are due till then.

The cargo of the St. Lucie, for Portland, includes 1050 cases oil, 200 cases canned goods, 75 cases sauce, 400 boxes starch, 5 bbls whisky, 100 kegs nails, 700 cases lye, 94 tons coal, and 500 tons pipe.

The Carrie Winslow's cargo, for the same port, comprises in part 1000 cases oil, 200 bales hemp, lot of railroad iron, etc.

Markets generally are quiet. Sales of California borax; Refined, 13c; concentrated, 12½, but now held higher.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

Shipping Notes.

A steamer has been ordered built to take the place of the lost Tacoma.

The Richard P. Buck, in the Sound trade, has been sold to Robert Sowers for $6000.

The new bark [illegible] Wm. Renton will bring to San Francisco [illegible] oranges from Guaymas.

According to the records of the British board of trade, during the year 1882 there were 1090 collisions of sailing vessels. Of these, 178 were sunk and 77 damaged. Of steamers there were 892 collisions, of which 5 were sunk and 259 damaged.

The number of vessels belonging to, or bound to or from ports of the United States reported totally lost and missing during February is 36. Of this list, 18 were wrecked, 10 abandoned, 3 missing, 4 burned, 2 [illegible], and 1 capsized. Among the list are the wrecked steamer Tacoma, ship R. R. Gregory, British bark Glaramara and the barkentine C. L. Taylor, all in the Pacific coast and foreign trade.

The Glaramara, previously reported, lies in seven or eight fathoms on a rocky bottom and is submerged, her masts having been cut away. Her foundering is considered due to the penetration of the hold by the rocks space and there appears no good reason why the vessel cannot be raised and cargo saved.

The barque Melancthon cleared from San Francisco on the 6th inst. and sailed next day.

The Chesebrough discharged more cargo at Astoria than was at first intended and she did not finish until noon to-day. She left up at 2 P. M. in tow of the Okklahama.

The Lighthouse tender Shubrick coaled at Albina and left down the river this morning.

The Columbia left San Francisco to-day with 2195 tons freight, 150 cabin and 308 steerage passengers.

NOTICE OF ANNUAL STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

To the Stockholders of the Oregon and California Railroad company.

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED THAT THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Oregon and California Railroad company will be held at the office of the company, at the city of Portland, county of Multnomah, and State of Oregon, on Tuesday the 10th day of April, 1883, at 11 o'clock A. M., of said day for the purpose of electing directors of said company to serve for the ensuing year, and transacting such other business as may come before the meeting.

And you are further notified that in pursuance of a resolution duly passed at a meeting of the board of directors of said company, held at the office of the company, March 5, 1883, the following resolution, authorizing the filing of supplementary articles of incorporation of said company, will be submitted to said annual stockholders' meeting, for consideration and adoption, viz:

Resolved, That the directors of this corporation be, and they are hereby instructed and directed to file, as soon as the same can be reasonably prepared and executed, supplementary articles of incorporation, amending Article III. of the present articles of this company, as amended by the supplementary articles heretofore filed, by inserting after the seventh subdivision of said Article III., substantially the following subdivisions:

Eighth—With the consent of the holders of an absolute majority in amount of the preferred stock of the company, at the time actually issued and outstanding, to sell and dispose of its railroad and property, or any part thereof; to lease, devise and let to any other company or corporation incorporated under the laws of Oregon, authorized to operate railroads and transact business in the state of Oregon, all and singular, its railroad and telegraph line then constructed, or to be constructed, or any portion thereof, with said tracks, depots, warehouses, stockyards, locomotives, cars, and other rolling stock, machinery and fixtures and appurtenances, ferries and ferry-boats, and all lands, easements, rights of way, and property used in connection therewith; to enter into any operating or traffic contract, or any contract in the nature of a lease, with any such other company or corporation, transferring to such company or corporation the [illegible] and [illegible] of its roads or any part thereof; to consolidate with any other corporation; to lease and operate the railroad or railroads of any corporation; to guarantee the payment of and assume the liabilities of any other corporation for bonds, coupons, dividends, or otherwise; to file supplementary articles of incorporation authorizing the corporation to engage in new enterprises, to increase its preferred or common capital stock, or both; and to construct and equip a railroad and telegraph line with all necessary branches, from a point at or near Forest Grove, in Washington county, Oregon, to Astoria, in Clatsop county, Oregon, to connect with its existing railroad, and to operate and maintain the same and carry freight and passengers thereon, and receive tolls therefor.

Ninth—To construct and equip a railroad and telegraph line, with all necessary branches, from the city of Portland, in Multnomah county, Oregon, via Hillsboro and McMinnville, to Corvallis in Benton county, Oregon, and a railroad and telegraph line, with all necessary branches, from Corvallis, in Benton county, Oregon, to Junction City, in Lane county, Oregon, and to maintain and operate the same, and transport freight and passengers thereon, and to receive tolls therefor.

Tenth—To construct, operate and maintain a railroad bridge, or railroad and wagon road bridge, or both across the Willamette river between the cities of Portland and East Portland, or above or below said cities, to connect its present railroads, and to collect and receive tolls for the passage of railroad trains and cars, goods, wares and merchandise, teams, wagons and other vehicles, live stock and foot passengers over the same.
